Access to information

Information regarding applications made to the Probate Office of the Supreme Court of Victoria will appear on a database made available on the Court's website which enables individuals to search the deceased's name in order to ascertain if an application for a grant of representation has been made. Data includes the name of the deceased, their date of death, the date of application and the status of the application.

Once an application is granted, the grant of representation including the will (if any) will appear on the RedCrest-Probate system. This document will be accessible by persons entering the unique identifier allocated to the application. The applicant will be provided with this identifier so that it can be provided to people who need to verify the applicant's authority to deal with estate property.

Files may be made available to the public to search on payment of a fee after the application has been granted.

Data and documents for finalised applications are transferred to the Public Records Office of Victoria, generally on an annual basis.

Privacy

The Supreme Court of Victoria collects personal information of RedCrest-Probate users in order to allow them to access the RedCrest-Probate system and to process payments via the system.

If you do not provide this information you may not be able to use, or fully use, the RedCrest-Probate system. The Court may disclose your personal information to third parties who provide it with (or help it provide) products and services (e.g. to financial services providers to process payments and to IT providers to administer and maintain the RedCrest-Probate system), including to overseas locations. The Court's privacy policy is available at <https://www.supremecourt.vic.gov.au/privacy>.

You can seek access to or seek to correct the personal information the Court holds about you (other than in relation to its judicial or quasi-judicial functions), or complain about a privacy breach, by contacting the Court on (03) 8600 2000 or Email Us
